(By Associated Press)

Madison.—There is practically no anthracite coal in Wisconsin.

There is Wednesday little shortage of coal in the state for threshing purposes. The east central portion is the only place where a pinch is felt. Priority shipments under the first right of Secretary Hoover's priority classification, giving first right to emergency shipments, will probably be requested by the fuel

Heated debate arose over availability of priority rights coal shipping to upper lake points and over the efficiency all-rail shipping as against rail-to-Erie ports and lake transportation to west bank ports Lake Michigan. The west bank dock owners were joined by the dock owners of Ashland and Superior in supporting the rail and lake shipments made against the all-rail shipment. It was shown that all rail sh

Fuson Arrested in Indianapolis on U. S. Warrant

According to advice received by U. S. District Attorney William H. Dougherty, the arrest of Raymond Fuson, alias Ivan Franklin Fuson, has been effected in Indianapolis, where he was arrested by the federal government for cashing war risk for state institutions and schools. Industries, there was little activity at the two mines which it was expected to open under state supervision. Whistles at the mines last Thursday morning, but few workmen responded. National Guardsmen sent a small force war work cleaning the mines and put machinery in shape for operation. Striking miners have shown no hostility toward the guardsmen.

MICHIGAN INDUSTRIES ARE PACING SHUTDOWNS

Lansing.—A number of industries in Michigan today are on short time, and the coal shovel shudders w check by forging the signature of his former wife in 1917. Fuson recently was employed by the United States department of the Beloit Daily News where he was arrested on the federal charge and was to have appeared before U. S. Commissioner Cunningham at Janesville, Wednesday.

According to advice from Beloit, Fuson has cashed several worthless checks at Beloit and Evanston, Ill. Fuson was formerly in the United States army.

In the next few days, according to reports to the state public utility commission, The Beloit Daily News reported it had a day supply of coal and that when fresh supplies come, it might be forced to cease operations. Other communities where the state reported they were in critical condition.

According to indirect reports it appears that there appears to be a problem whether enough coal can be obtained to keep the state's power plants running.

States army and the allotment checks to his wife it is claimed were cashed by him with her consent.

Besides being wanted by the federal government, he also faces a charge of bigamy, having been in-

RADIO ICE CREAM SOCIAL IS LATEST IN RURAL DISTRICT

Now comes the radio-ice cream social for rural entertainment. One of the first—if not the first—was held on the farm near Kokomo, Wednesday night. People from the neighborhood gathered at the farm home and heard the concert on the radio.

Coming to Rock county are the rural movies. The Farm Bureau is planning to purchase a portable movie camera and projectors in the country. An attachment can be secured to obtain power sufficient to operate the machine from an automobile.

There are about 25 farmers in Rock county having radio outlets.

REACH 700 MARK FOR DAIRY POOL

August Price for Fluid Milk to Be $2.05 a Hundred-weight.

Reaching the 700 mark, Rock county milk producers are expecting to obtain the county's quota of 750 signers Wednesday in the drive to rebuild the Chicago milk marketing company under the plans of the committee of nine.

There were 120 signers obtained in the Orfordville local and as soon as the drive will be completed in the districts where the campaign has been started. Tentative dates have been set for the meetings in Milton Junction, Footville and Shonerville.

Progress was reported during the county committee meeting held in Janesville Tuesday night. It was announced that the milk price for August would be $2.05 per hundred-weight, a five cent increase.

A ruling is to be obtained by the committee of nine whether the new price will be applied to the milk of the old company, and it is believed that they do not, as the bonds floated recently to pay the one month's back milk of the old company.

THE GAZETTE'S PLATFORM

Read every energy to finish the high school building so it may be used before the end of 1922. With the completion of the building a community center will be solved. Janesville needs and should have ample hotel facilities to care for the public. The hotel is especially true when the high school is completed and the auditorium is available for the winter. Finish the paving of Janesville streets as soon as there can be the necessary readjustment for the city. Do not place a heavy burden on the people. Give the city a park. There is now available $10,000 for this purpose. Do not place a heavy burden on the people. Finish the city and zoning plans. Memorializing for World War soldiers, the living and the dead—to be also an historical building.

ROCK COUNTY CORN FIELDS

When the first settlers came to Rock county they raised wheat. In 1850 Rock county was one of the largest producers of wheat among the counties of the United States. Ohio only was a rival in that time. But eventually wheat came to be the lesser crop. Hay and other grains, beside wheat, took the place of the king of cereals on Southern Wisconsin farms. The chinich bug and the Hessian fly killed off crops and rust attacked fields hitherto immune. Wheat could be raised cheaper on the new lands of the prairies of Kansas and Nebraska and when the Dakotas were settled another immense producing section for wheat was added to the nation. Corn was raised from earliest times in small quantities as a necessary family food and for some of the stock. But it was not a staple crop. As one rides over the county now, not only through Rock but other Southern Wisconsin counties, it becomes plain that corn is coming into its own as a crop and has assumed the place which wheat once held as the leader. It has been years since the corn crop gave the promise it does this year. The season seems to have very nearly right for corn although some of the wisest of the old heads say it has been too cool for big corn. However, we shall see. It is another evidence of "Rock County First."

Read does not seem to have been so badly shaken with the Wilson wind.

NO FISHING LICENSES.

From every part of the state comes support of the Gazette's position against the scheme of the Conservation commission to make it necessary to have a license to fish. The thousands of people who steal away for a few hours or days to drop a line into the water and have a fine day of sport and outing, whether there is a fish caught or not, have registered their unqualified disapproval of the scheme. It is a grand way to get more money from the citizens of the state. That is about all. The Conservation commission may need it in order to hire more inspectors and add to the political machine which has been built up but the people refuse to be mulcted any more. There was the plea that the game fish were being caught too fast. We have thousands of lakes in Wisconsin and other thousands of streams in which there should be fish. That is why we maintain our fish hatcheries.

One of the greatest features we present to the tourist, and we have had several hundred thousand of them here this year, is our fishing. Hedge about our own people, father, mother, the boys and girls, with the necessity of being licensed and add that also to the tourist who wants a day's fishing, and we arrive at the worst kind of paternalism with a thousand or so inspectors to see that the law is enforced—making it hard to be decent. Any member of the assembly who would introduce a bill to that effect will certainly write his own epitaph.

It might just as well be recognized that Chicago is filled with jay walkers in spite of ordinances against the habit.

ATTACKING THE CONSTITUTION

The great bar to the establishment of the government of the socialists and the communal radicals is the Constitution of the United States. Assaults made on the constitution by specious argument for the repeal of certain of its provisions and changes in the manner and form of government are merely those tending to break down the constitutional barriers to carrying out the full measure of government under which we live and the establishment of the socialist state. "We can never develop a Christian civilization until we abandon a system based on private property." These are the words of Lieutenant Governor Comings and a part of a creed of his fellows. That means the destruction of private ownership of anything. Of course, in order to reach that beneficent state set forth as the doctrine of the lieutenant governor of Wisconsin, we must destroy the constitution. One of the ways to do this is to accept the fiat of the senior senator in his Cincinnati speech and so amend the constitution as to make Congress the arbitrator on all questions and remove the judiciary from its powers and separate it from its functions. The terminal of socialism of those who start off by being ultra-progressive is reached by an easy road to travel.

Hacking off a piece of the constitution here and there and building in a piece in other places may in the end so mangle it that it will not be recognized. To the people who have made homes, have achieved a comfort in old age or in middle life, to them there comes a proposal that all this shall be given to some new set of well who have nothing. That is all it amounts to.

Yet we are asked here in Wisconsin to subscribe to a program of legislation and governmental doctrine that will do that very thing. We

Soils of the Old Country

By FREDERICK A. HASKIN

Washington — Soils play an important part in the economic development of civilization, and science has begun to take serious account of this fact. Dr. C. F. Marbut of the department of agriculture has just returned from Europe, where he made a study of soils. He emphasizes the need for this country to know the exact soil conditions in other parts of the world.

The amount of lime or organic matter in the soil of some distant country may not seem to concern this country to any great extent, yet this one factor may vitally affect the future of our export trade in some agricultural staple.

The importance of knowing about soil conditions of other parts of the world is greater now than it was a few years ago and such information will constantly become more significant. Considerable areas in Europe and South America are still used for grazing by nomadic peoples who have not reached a settled agricultural stage. Cultivation of the plains of Rumania was begun only about 50 years ago. And enormous stretches of land in Uruguay, Argentina, and southern Brazil, similar in soil conditions to our corn belt, are not under cultivation.

When South American lands are planted in crops and when farm machinery and scientific methods come into general use in these sections the United States may find that it has some new and powerful competitors in world trade. The South American countries will most likely grow corn if their soil conditions are suitable. If the Argentine planter is likely to become a dangerous competitor of the corn belt farmer in this country we should know the probabilities and be ready.

Some parts of Europe, too, may go into corn raising more extensively in the future. As Europe becomes more prosperous and the people consume more meat there will be a greater demand for corn to feed stock. Europe may buy more grain from this country then, but if it can be raised there cheaply and in quantities the United States may be asked for smaller instead of larger shipments. Knowledge of European soil conditions will help agricultural experts to prophesy about these matters with some degree of accuracy.

Thus, part of Rumania has a belt of black soil somewhat like the corn land of the central Dakotas, Nebraska, and Kansas. This is significant when you consider that Rumania is now the great corn exporting country of Europe. Dr. Marbut had thought it possible that the cheap labor in Europe there might be a large area in Rumania capable of producing corn as cheaply as this country does. If Rumania should adopt our methods of farming. After spending some time in Rumania and studying the soil, however, he thinks it unlikely that that country will become a corn growing rival of the United States. They have no land the exact equivalent of our great corn belt.

Our problems are numerous for we have a greater variety of soils than any other country on earth and we raise a wide range of agricultural products. We think of a kind of soil as being peculiar to some one region. Yet again and again striking similarities occur. The soil of the fertile Hungarian plains is reproduced in a strip of land running through parts of Minnesota, the Dakotas, Nebraska, Iowa and Kansas.

The famous sod of Ireland is, on soil, very like that along the coast of Washington and Oregon. The Kentucky bluegrass that we think of as typically American grows on limestone soil very much like that of northern France. The French soil is somewhat shallower. Dr. Marbut found it is the best grass and fruit soil as being used for raising small grain and fruit and for pastures. It is interesting to find that the soils of old Bohemia are almost identical with those of south-east Pennsylvania, known as Chester soils; and that the soils of southern Germany resemble the best part of Kentucky. The Shenandoah valley of Virginia and the Lebanon and Cumberland valleys of Pennsylvania. With all the variety of soils in this country immigrants of Germany and Bohemia have settled in regions where the soils are similar to those at home. This may account to some extent for the success of the German farmers in the east.

Few of us have ever thought of the soil of Greece as being anything like that in this country, yet there is a parallel. Dr. Marbut compares the soils of Greece to those near Tucson, Ariz. In both regions the soils are reddish in color and have a hardpan subsoil.

The Greek farmers had the ideal of producing their own grain, wine, and oil, and sitting under their own fig trees, and the farmers of Greece still grow grapes, olives, figs, and wheat.

Crops are meager there because of the climate. The rainfall of Athens is only about 12 inches, and it all falls in winter. Irrigation is almost impossible because there are no rivers from which sufficient water can be taken. When you have a country that is too dry to grow alfalfa, grass, or clover there is not much that can be done to rotate crops.

Dr. Marbut expects to make chemical analyses of 250 soil samples he has brought from Europe, and he says that analyses of the Greek and other soils may show differences that his observations in Europe did not reveal.

Dr. Marbut spent several days collecting samples and studying the old soils on the higher part of the Roman Campagna. Much of the land about Rome is poor. However, there are some soil near the city, mostly south and some to the east, that have been farmed for many centuries and still produce good crops of alfalfa and wheat. Samples of soil from alfalfa and wheat fields along the Appian Way were brought back for analysis.

European civilization was developed on poor soils and the people of western Europe have struggled for centuries with the soil problem. Dr. Marbut says. In this part of Europe the first attempt to improve farm land came through the discovery that animal manures enrich soil. Then they discovered that by resting the soil one year in three production would be increased. That was the beginning of the three field system of feudal times.

Even that did not solve the problem of raising crops on impoverished soil. Eventually man discovered that by growing grass he not only helped the soil but he could feed more live stock and so have more animal waste to put on the soil.

The latest stage in soil history was the discovery of chemical fertilizers about 75 years ago. Now there are soil bureaus and experts. Dr. Marbut of our Government bureau of soils is a member of the international conference of soil scientists.

are asked to accept congress afraid to defeat nefarious legislation because it is "popular" taking the place of a judicial body actuated by no such fear of political death.

Danger lurks in this destructive propaganda. It is clothed in lying language and parades under the guise of being progressive—truly it is progressive toward chaos—the perfect socialist state.

You can buy a cow in Argentina for $2 American money and then you wonder what you will do with the cow. Sirofin and port-house cost 7 cents a pound there and under cold storage this meat could be shipped to the United States and undersell every packer in the country. The result would be to so lower the price of livestock that a business of farmers and cattle raisers amounting to millions of dollars would be ruined. These are some of the things the tariff question brings out.

AFRAID OF APPLE PIE
I would not change my place for his, though he has much of gold.
Nor do I pray to be as he when I am counted old.
Though some there are who envy him the wealth which he has gained,
No one shall say I've looked at him and bitterly complained.
For once when dining out with him the waitress offered pie
And while I took a goodly piece, he sadly passed it by.

"Were I to share that joy with you," he said, "then I should know
A night of dreadful agony and bitterness and woe.
I'd gladly give my stocks and bonds and all I own today
If I could eat the healthy meal I've watched you put away.
But I must shun the heavy foods which you so gladly buy.
And never more am I to know the taste of apple pie."

"I do not wish to burden you with all my tale of grief
But I'm destined forevermore the joy of roasting beef."
Though you may dine on what you will and eat what fate you please,
For me a thousand agonies are in one bit of cheese.
And should he awake all night in dreadful pain were I
To gratify the mad desire I have for apple pie."

I have my share of things to dread, I'm fearful now and then
I shall not earn the money which I owe to other men.
The fears of poverty are mine, at times I am
That where I'm striving for success a failure shall be made;
But I'd not change my place for his until the day I die
And be afraid of such a gentle friend as apple pie.

LOOKING BACKWARD

FORTY YEARS AGO

August 3, 1882 — A new sidewalk in front of Eldredges' Empire Drug store and Sutherland's bookstore is a good improvement and all that is now necessary is to raise J. M. Bostwick's adjoining walk up to grade. Buffalo Bill and his theatrical company of 20 will give their first performance in this city August 26. They will here a week previous to that time for rehearsals.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

August 3, 1892 — A vacancy in the school board broke up the meeting last night. Professor Zinch has moved from the Fourth to the second ward and when only four of the 7 members showed up a last night's meeting, he being one of those absent, it was not known whether or not there was a quorum present, as his moving might have been taken as a resignation.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

August 3, 1902 — Work on the city hall will be somewhat delayed due to a slight shortage in the stock of lumber. The city hall is being dedicated their new rooms in the City block over the Zeigler store last night with appropriate exercises. The national president of the Gideons, Frank Gurlick, will be in the city to talk at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow.

TEN YEARS AGO

August 3, 1912 — Miss Lydia Kinsey, Ilwaco, made her annual report yesterday to the board of directors. It showed a great increase in circulation over last year. Judge Charles L. Pifford was selected president of the board and Miss Kinsey's resignation was accepted. The third ward carnival of Jackman street is attracting crowds from all over the city.

SALT WATER AS A REMEDY

It is a popular belief that sore eyes are benefited by bathing with salt water and that a salt water spray is beneficial for chronic rhinitis or, as the doctor says, "runny nose." This is a true belief, but some people even carry it to the point of absurdity by assuming that salt water bathing "strengthens the eyes" or the eye-sight or that salt water sprays or salt water snuffing or douching of the nasal passages wards off or prevents respiratory infections such as the influenza call "colds."

A rather strong solution of common salt in water is of distinct value in the treatment of certain conditions. For instance, a large gauze dressing kept with a solution of a heaping, tablespoonful of common salt and a level teaspoonful of citrate of sodium in a pint of boiled water is far superior to any poultice on a rising boil or similar infection, and actually favors drainage or "draw."

When it comes to applying salt water to the delicate mucous membrane of the eye or the nasal cavity, a strong solution is too irritating and if frequently or habitually used will do harm. For bathing the eyes, which are always sore or just irritated by foreign bodies, a physiological salt solution is ideal. That is, approximately a rounded teaspoonful of common salt dissolved in a pint of boiled water. In such strength the solution will not irritate the eye or the nose any more than the tears themselves do. If very little more salt is used, or none at all, the solution or water will smart and irritate.

Q. Are the vitamins in milk destroyed when it is heated?—W. N. E. Vitamins A and B are not easily destroyed by heat. Milk can be pasteurized, sterilized and dried without affecting them. Vitamin C, however, is affected by heat and in infant food or in condensed milk should also have an efficient antiscorbutic such as orange juice or tomato juice.

Q. Please settle a controversy by stating whether the characters in "Mair Street" were taken from real life?—O. H. M. A. Sinclair Lewis says "they do not in any case represent real persons."

Q. What is cumulative voting?—H. S. I. Cumulative voting is the system first introduced into Great Britain in 1870 by which the voter is entitled to as many votes as there are persons to be elected. He may give them all to one candidate, or may divide them among the candidates. The states of Illinois and Michigan have used this method in some elections.

Q. Where was rice first used?—F. J. O'B. A. Rice is as old as history. Probably it had its origin in India, approximately 5,000 B. C. from a plant called Newar and Nibbar. Rice is mentioned in the Talmud and is referred to by numerous Greek and Roman writers.

Q. Is rock crystal ever called "iron" street?—L. E. S. A. Crystal is derived from a Greek word signifying a hard crust or more specifically ice, and was applied by the Greeks at least 400 B. C. to a material which they supposed to be of a hard and durable form of frozen water. This is a colorless, transparent variety of quartz still called rock crystal and the belief as to its nature lasted into the sixteenth century.

Q. What was the origin of the term "woodenhead"?—R. H. A. The exact origin of the epithet "woodenhead" is not known, but perhaps it is derived from Pope's characterization of "the bookish blockhead, ignorantly read, with loads of learned lumber in his head."

Q. Is it correct to call silver and gold money, currency?—A. H. K. A. Currency is sometimes used as synonymous with the phrase "medium of exchange" but more commonly confined to the paper element of the medium. If used in the broader sense, two kinds should be distinguished, metallic and paper.

Q. Who gave the Republican party its name?—C. A. S. A. The first known suggestion of the name "Republican" was in a letter written by Horace Greeley, the earliest suggestion of importance to adopt it was held at Jackson, Michigan, July 6, 1854.

Q. What nations have repudiated public debts?—R. U. A. Nearly all the leading countries have at some time in their history repudiated indebtedness. The United States, for instance, failed to redeem the Continental currency.

Right now is the time to get the family's winter supply of fruits and vegetables safe on the pantry shelves. There is a feeling of elated achievement when the housekeeper can look at row upon row of home-canned goods and say: "I did it." Canning is no longer a difficult process. The newly perfected one-perfect method is quick, perfect and does away with all the labor and discomfort of canning. This perfect method is the only one of all sorts of fruits and vegetables are given in an authoritative book, issued by the States Relation Service.

The Only Thing That Burns

Coal, wood and oil do not burn. The gases separated from them by applying heat are consumed. Gas is the only thing that burns. When you use raw fuel, you are merely attempting to operate your own gas plant instead of using clean, efficient gas which comes through pipes ready to serve you without the annoying work and dirt connected with the use of raw fuels.

THE ONLY FUEL FOR HEATING WATER

Gas is pre-eminently the fuel for this purpose, not only on account of its great cleanliness and convenience, but because it supplies the only heat which can be regulated perfectly, thus keeping the temperature of the water uniform.

When coal is used to obtain a limited supply of hot water, a great percentage of the gases go up the flue as waste heat. When gas is used, you get the highest rate of efficiency that is possible in any water heating device. See the gas water heater at our showroom.

The Tattooed Arm

By Isabel Ostrander

What horrible and mysterious power was forcing the three Drake brothers, Wall Street broker, ROBERT, eminent scientist, and ANDREW, recently returned from Australia, to place themselves in such perilous situations? Some power had forced Hobart to deliver a speech at the public square, Roker to address in the city hall, and Andrew to sit on the porch of the Drake mansion, and without their knowledge.

PATRICIA DRAKE, daughter of Hobart, security detective sergeant, and his colleagues, SOLOMON, a detective, and Miles as employed as a houseman and Scottie as gardener. Following a series of mysterious events, Patricia suddenly disappeared—an event which Miles cannot understand as he and Patricia were in each other's confidence. Possibly the attempt of her sinister aunt, MISS JERUSA DRAKE, to break up her love with Hobart.

ROBERT DRAKE, has been the cause. Miles is suddenly summoned by Hobart Drake.

A wave of exultation swept over him. The eye-lid quivered and slowly, fluttering, it closed.

"Good! Now I can't take your message to your brother for you, the thing you were about to tell him when you were overcome, but do you want to see him? Can he hear the name you were about to speak?"

Miles waited but the eye stared unblinkingly, although a spreading moisture had come into it and the pupil seemed to enlarge and darken with the effort at expression.

"Is there something you think I can do?"

The eye closed, more quickly this time.

"Do you want anything? Is it in this room?"

The lid remained open but the eye itself moved toward the right as though striving to see through the blank wall beside which he had been placed.

Beyond the wall was the locked door behind which lay the relics of the past in the impotent guardianship of the woman centuries dead.

"You mean your storeroom, don't you, sir? You know that your belongings in here have been searched?—You know also that the lock of your storeroom has been tampered with?"

Miles drew a deep breath for at each question the eye had widened rapidly and an eager glint had shot across its dulled expanse.

"The room has been ransacked, sir. Did you know that?"

The eye widened and into it came a look of sudden despair that Miles obeyed a sudden impulse.

"I found a new key in the lock, and the door swung open. The only thing that wasn't touched is that long box that looks like a mummy case. It's safe, sir. I can fix that door so it can't be opened again by anyone. Shall I do it, sir?"

"In these cases, nothing—"

The eye winked spasmodically and rested on his for an instant while a single tear welled forth and rolled down the waxen cheek.

"The next day was a busy one. At day break Miles presented himself at Miss Drake's door with one side of his face convincingly swollen. He means of an improvised cotton plumper which he had inserted inside his cheek.

"It's my tooth, ma'am," he explained. "I just can't stand it any longer, and the millman will give me a lift to the station if you can spare me to run to town and see my dentist."

Permission was granted and he was soon rattling toward town in the early train. On arrival he went straight to Headquarters and then journeyed up.

Dinner Stories

Isabel, aged nine, had just been told the story of Daniel in the lions' den. Then mother asked:

"And what do you think Daniel did?"

"The very first thing after he was saved from the lions?"

"Without much hesitation Isabel replied: 'Why he must have telegraphed home to his wife to tell her he was all right.'"

Secretary Mellor sat at a banquet in Washington.

"England and America are paying the bill," he said. "I could name one or two other countries whose financial policy is very little better than old Aunt Caroline's."

"Poor old Aunt Caroline!" said a young colored girl. "She was takin' on terrible like I seen her last ebenin'." Cold as it was, she hadn't a nickel in do house to buy coal.

"Poor old Aunt Caroline!" said a second colored girl. "She was takin' on terrible like I seen her last ebenin'."

"How she got it?"

"She done pawa de stove."

The Sunday school lesson was on Job. The superintendent of the primary department was earnestly endeavoring to picture the patient endurance of Job to his youthful audience. To this end he was dwelling at length upon poor Job's sufferings and the facility of all medical treatment.

A small boy down front who had been absorbed in the tale suddenly held up his hand.

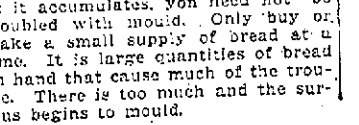

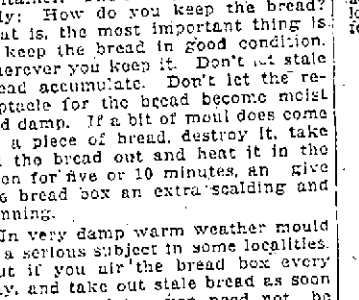

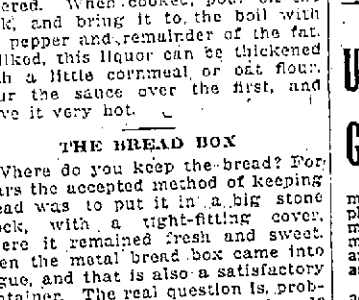

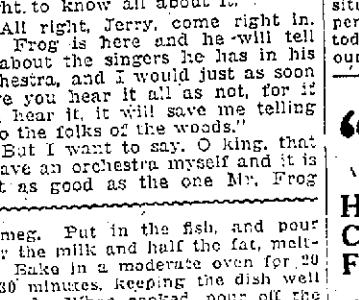

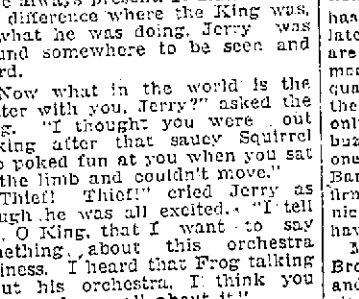

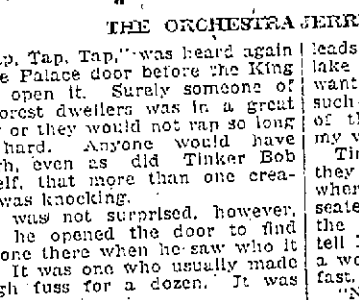

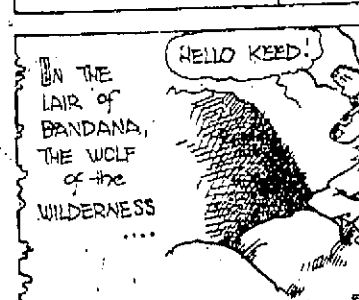

"What is it, Willie?" asked the superintendent.

"Have they tried Doctor Smith?" asked Willie, joyfully naming the family physician.
